Most students: do the paper,
check the score, move on.

That measures where you are.

It changes nothing.

The mark scheme isn't an answer key. It's a written record of how the examiner thinks.

1

For every lost mark, ask:

"What exact phrasing was the examiner looking for?"

Mark schemes reward specific wording. Vague right-ish answers score zero.

2

"What structure did the model answer follow?"

Point, evidence, link. Step, working, units. Every board has patterns it pays for. Learn yours.

3

"Could I produce this from nothing, under time?"

If not, that topic goes on your recall list. Blurt it tomorrow, again in 3 days, test it in a week.

The review takes longer than the paper.

It's also where the grade moves.

Follow for the stuff school never taught you.
